

I grew up playing sports. I loved being part of a team, competing not just to win, but to enjoy the game.

Years later when I started designing, I was inspired by the functional aspect of clothes that were created for sport. There was something about the way people dressed to compete on the playing fields that I found inspiring and real. As time went by, I began to understand the importance of sports and fitness in staying healthy, as well as the comfort and appeal of clothes designed with a real sense of purpose for those activities.

Polo Sport is my commitment to living well in clothes designed to function not just in the athletic world, but every day. I'm really excited to bring back this iconic brand which is about looking good and feeling confident in every part of your life.
