SLEEPY DAYS OF SUMMER? NOT SO FAST! POP'S BIGGEST STARS ARE BRINGING THEIR LATEST HITS TO THE 305. BY LAUREN BROWN

Ellie Goulding made one thing clear the last time she was in Miami—she comes to the Magic City to party! Performing an intimate, poolside show to launch her line of MAC Cosmetics at The Miami Beach Edition during Art Basel, the 29-year-old singer/songwriter was fighting a cold. Worried that her fading voice wouldn't be heard over the excitement of the crowd, she promised to party with her fans later that night when they could be “really loud” together. But to get through the set without disappointing, she revealed to the audience her secret weapon: “I’m going to drink my way through it. I’ve had a few tequilas. It’s for the best. I’m feeling quite good, actually.”

Six months later, Goulding is making a grand return to Miami—and throwing a much bigger bash at the AmericanAirlines Arena. On her critically acclaimed and hit-making third album, Delirium, the world has gotten to know a bolder and happier Goulding. Ditching her ethereal, dreamy folk style for full-blown dance/pop, Goulding last year explained to Rolling Stone, “I feel like I’ve opened my eyes to a lot more things in the world and I feel like I can change them. I feel a lot more positive about life. I feel like I have a lot more confidence and power.”

On this tour, quieter moments may come when she performs songs like the sexy hit “Love Me Like You Do” off the 50 Shades of Grey soundtrack—but expect to be up and out of your seat most of the night as Goulding shakes and shimmies her way through upbeat hits like “Something in the Way You Move” and “On My Mind.” From the moment the “lights” dim, Goulding is hosting a party you won’t forget.

Florence + The Machine, May 13

The band’s third studio album, How Big, How Blue, How Beautiful, is a devastating and beautiful breakup record with hits like “Ship to Wreck.”

Hearing these songs live means watching lead singer Florence Welch wear her heart on her sleeve. And, bonus: It’s a real treat that they’re kicking off the US leg of this emotional tour right here in Miami.

Selena Gomez, June 11

The former Disney star uses her new album, Revival, to fight back at the media scrutiny she’s received over the years. Ready to take those personal songs to a live audience, Gomez looks to shed her “goody-two-shoes” image and come into her own as a pop star during this tour.

Justin Bieber, July 2–3

Known in Miami more for partying (and even some legal drama including a 2014 DUI) than his music, Bieber tries to change that image when his latest tour rolls into town. Expect a soulful and even introspective night of music from the former tween idol as he promotes Purpose, his most mature album to date.
