There's a reason this is the most often-done home improvement project - change your entire reality with a change of color! Or start over with a clean slate of fresh, pure white.

Add crown molding - no, really

Crown molding adds charm and personality to a home, and you don't need to spend hours at the miter saw cutting perfect corners.

Nowadays you can buy foam crown molding that's easy to cut with a hand saw and adheres with joint compound. An easy and elegant upgrade that won't break the bank - or your back.

Add stair runners

Slippery stairs tripping you up? Carpeting them can cost thousands.

You can use several stair runners to spruce up those steps, and you tape, staple the runners over it and finish off with upholstery tacks.

Front entry facelift

Just changing the entrance of your home can make it all feel different. Check out estate sales and thrift stores - you never know what cool lighting you'll find. New front doors can cost thousands - paint it a fun new color instead, or switch out the door hardware for a few hundred bucks.

Install open shelving

If you've got some empty wall space in the kitchen, installing a nice wood shelf or two not only upgrades your look, it also gives you a place to display your better dishes and spice jars (and your great-aunt's milk glass that you hide until she visits).

Add plants and flowers

A fairly inexpensive way to spruce up your place is adding some flower pots to the porch, or switching out some tired plants in the front yard. Indoors, plants like the Chinese evergreen and Devil's Ivy thrive on low light (or go for fake plants - ssh, they're so good now nobody will know).

Fix that nasty caulk caulk. For just a few bucks and some elbow grease, this can look brand-new with a layer or two of new white caulk. Simply remove the old moldy stuff with a utility knife and caulk away.

Upgrade a small appliance

WIKIMEDIA.ORG

Most of us have to use precious counter space for grungy microwaves and toaster ovens. If one of these small appliances is underperforming, it may be time to replace it. Or add a new one that's not only helpful but pretty - KitchenAid mixers are like artwork for your counter.

Don't overlook the details

COMMONS.WIKIMEDIA....

COVERS LOOKING AWAY. Consider switching, so to speak, them out for something that matches your home. Since you don't need to change the ones hiding behind furniture, this is a small but noticeable detail your guests will appreciate.

Shine up the wood floor

PIXABAY

Did you know wood floors should be polished once a year (or every 4-6 months for high-traffic areas)? This is easily (and cheaply) done with
